Ohio Emergency Management Agency Unveils New Logo Roles and expectations acknowledged

COLUMBUS (January 3, 2007) — Today, Ohio Emergency Management Agency Executive Director Nancy J. Dragani, joined by William Walker, president of the Emergency Management Association of Ohio, unveiled a new logo for the Ohio EMA.

The three stars in this logo serve as a visual reminder that there are county, state and federal agencies dedicated to protecting the lives and property of all Ohioans. In addition to the stars, the logo incorporates the words Public Safety, Public Trust. These simple words serve as guiding principles for Ohio's emergency management personnel at the county and state levels.

“Ohio's emergency management personnel are dedicated to the service of others,” said Dragani. “We believe in protecting the safety of the public while continuing to earn the public's trust.”

“On behalf of the Emergency Management Association of Ohio, I extend our congratulations to the Ohio EMA on the unveiling of their new logo,” said Walker. “As the stars symbolize, Ohio's county and state emergency management personnel stand together, prepared to respond to any emergency or disaster which impacts our communities and to lead efforts against the effects of future disasters.”

Both Dragani and Walker agreed that every Ohioan must accept the challenge to make their lives and the lives of their families safer by becoming involved in the preparedness process. For more information about emergency management and the steps every home, business or school can take to prepare, including having a disaster plan, a disaster supply kit and weather alert radio, visit www.ema.ohio.gov, www.fema.gov or contact your county emergency management agency.
